DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 23-27 and 29-33 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent 6,018,764 to Field in view of U.S. Patent 5,982,445 to Eyer.

Regarding claims 23 and 32, Field discloses an MPEG system which transmits both MPEG video and html pages, packet identifiers are used to identify each data type, in Figure 3, the incoming signal goes through demux 205, which routes HTML data to HTML processor 215 which process the html data for display, and video decompressor 240 which decompresses the video (column 5, line 3-column 6, line 27, column 7, lines 27-59). Field inherently uses a mapping table to identify program data type as a table is required to recognize the data type, and field discloses the use of a programming service table for the audio and video (column 6, lines 54-67). Field does not disclose a composite image utilizing the video and Internet information. Eyer discloses a composite imaging system in which html data and video data are combined together and displayed simultaneously (Figure 4, column 4, lines 45-47, column 9, lines 14-43, column 10, lines 27-59). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art, at the time of invention to modify Field to simultaneously display video and html data as taught by Eyer, thus enabling a user to learn more about the program they are watching, such as a movie name or movie review.

Regarding claims 24 and 25, Field discloses that the Internet information identified via packet ids (column 7, lines 27-41). Field inherently utilizes packet Ids headers for video information as Field discloses the use of the MPEG 2 video standard (column 5, lines 15-22).

Regarding claim 26, Field discloses the use of a web browser to display HTML data (column 7, lines 60-column 8, line 4).

Regarding claims 27 and 33, Field and Eyer disclose an html-enabled decoder, which receives MPEG video. Field and Eyer do not disclose the use of a HDTV compliant television signal. The examiner takes official notice that the use of HDTV compliant video is well known in the art. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art, at the time of invention to modify Field and Eyer to utilize HDTV compliant video, in order to provide a user with a higher quality picture.

Regarding claims 29-31, Field and Eyer disclose an html-enabled decoder, which receives MPEG video. Field and Eyer do not disclose whether the program map information associates the Internet information with the video information. The examiner takes official notice that associating video content packets with auxiliary data is well known in the art. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time of invention to modify Field/Eyer to associate the video with the Internet data, thus providing supplementary content enabling a user to learn more about the program they are watching.

Claims 28 and 34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent 6,018,764 to Field in view of U.S. Patent 5,982,445 to Eyer in further view of U.S. Patent 5,778,181 to Hidary.

Regarding claims 28 and 34, Field and Eyer disclose an html-enabled decoder, which receives MPEG video. Field and Eyer do not disclose the synchronization of the web page and video data. Hidary discloses a system in which received webpages have time stamps which indicate when they should be synchronized and displayed with the video, video may be broadcast or from a DVD (column 3, line 64-column 4, line 18, line 64-column 5, line 13, line 41-column 6, line 24). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time of invention to modify Field and Eyer to synchronize the web content with the video as taught by Hidary, so that a user may learn more about the topic of the program they are watching.
